Yes.

There are 267 colleges and universities that currently include the words 'gender identity' in their non-discrimination statements. Indiana University Bloomington currently has that phrase in its student code of conduct. I fully support adding these words to the university's anti-discrimination statement. (You should know that DePauw University, where I obtained my undergraduate degree is currently the only university in Indiana that includes this statement and has since 1999.) I will actively work to insert these two words in our policy.
